

Melbourne Cup 2015

Fame Game leads a star-studded pack

Fame Game's looking set to play a leading role. But everyone says fame can be a fickle friend...

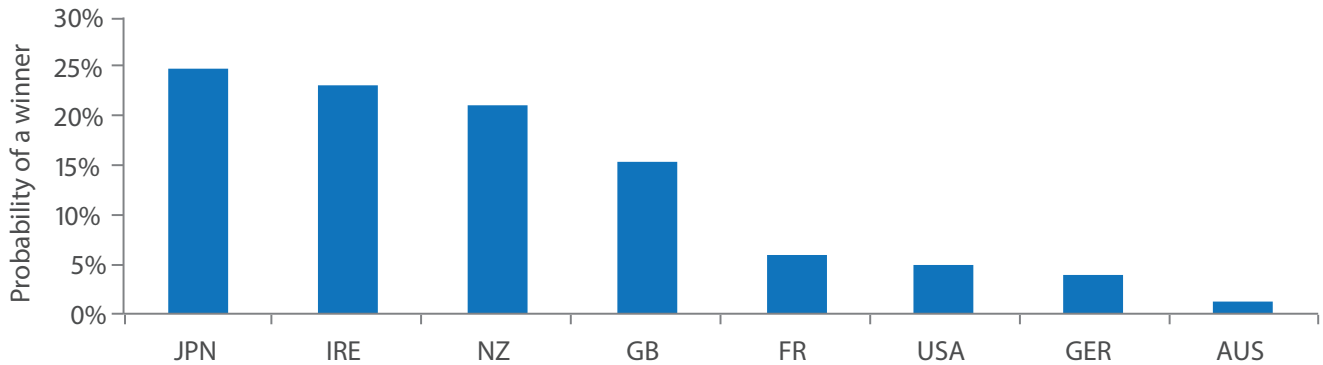

Four seasons in one day? Snow way!

The chances of Melbournians seeing Snow Sky prevail on Tuesday certainly look as unlikely as the city itself receiving a dusting of the white stuff. While Melbourne's outer suburbs occasionally see some snowflakes, the last time the CBD had a snow blanket was in 1951.

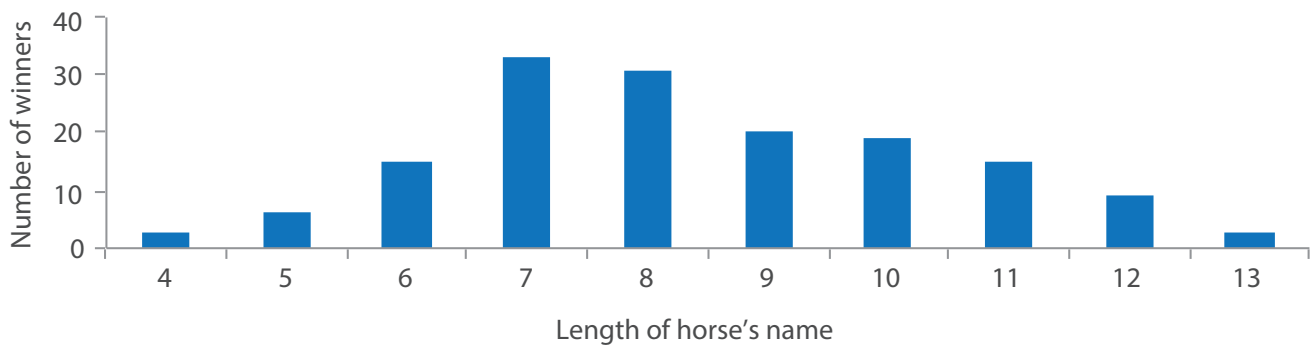

Australia might need a leg-up

With more than a 20% chance of a Kiwi horse taking out the Cup, our neighbours across the Tasman appear to have the sporting odds stacked in their favour this week!

What's in a name?

If the history books are anything to go by, horses with seven or eight letters in their names are the most likely to take home the Melbourne Cup. Fame Game appears appropriately titled to win the mane event! Who Shot Thebarman, on the other hand (or should we say hoof)...

Got a top tip?

Has our horsing around with numbers got you chomping at the bit to predict a winner? Share your top strategy with sydooffice@taylorfry.com.au, and the best will win half a dozen bottles of sparkling wine.

Nagging problems with numbers?

If you find dealing with statistics a night-mare, or need a helping hand (or fourteen) using your data to get you over the line, contact our analytics champions today.

Contact us

Alan Greenfield

Actuary, Practice Co-Lead
– Government & Analytics

P +61 (2) 9249 2903

E alan.greenfield@taylorfry.com.au

Richard Brookes

Actuary, Practice Co-Lead
– Government & Analytics

P +61 (2) 9249 2911

E richard.brookes@taylorfry.com.au